How to Open and Maintain a Deposit Account in the Copyright Office

THE PURPOSE OF DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS

The Copyright Office maintains a system of Deposit Accounts for the convenience of those who frequently use its services. An individual or firm may establish a Deposit Account in the Copyright Office and may make advance deposits into that account. Deposit Account holders can charge copyright fees against the balance in their accounts instead of sending separate remittances with applications and other requests for services.

A DEPOSIT ACCOUNT IS NOT A CHARGE ACCOUNT

Deposit Accounts do not operate in the same way as commercial charge accounts and cannot be overdrawn or used as a form of advance credit. Funds must be available in a Deposit Account for the payment of copyright fees before an application for registration can be accepted or other services performed.

MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS FOR DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS

- When the account is opened, the initial deposit should amount to at least $250. Make checks payable to Register of Copyrights.

- All subsequent deposits into the account should also be $250 or more. They may be paid by check, money order, or electronic funds transfer. See the back of this sheet for details.
- Subsequent deposits may be made by credit card. Send the credit card information by phone, fax, or email.
- There should be at least 12 transactions a year.
- If fees are to be charged against a Deposit Account, the exact name and number of the account must be given on all applications for registration or requests for services.
- The Deposit Account holder must maintain a sufficient balance to cover all charges against the account. The Copyright Office will send holders a monthly statement for any month during which the account was active, showing deposits, charges, and balances. However, for the reasons explained below, it is important for holders to keep their own records and to make sure that the Office is not forced to delay action because of insufficient funds in a Deposit Account.

WHY MAINTAINING A SUFFICIENT BALANCE IS IMPORTANT

Do not allow your Deposit Account to become depleted.

It is important to maintain a sufficient balance in a Deposit Account, because a copyright registration is effective on the date the Copyright Office receives all the required elements in acceptable form, including the fee. If a Deposit Account has become depleted, the effective date of registration cannot be determined until funds replenishing the account are received. Further, if the deficiency is not corrected within 60 days, the deposit copies may be transferred to other departments of the Library of Congress. The Deposit Account holder may have to resubmit a claim to copyright by sending another application and additional deposit copies of the work to be registered.

SERVICE CHARGE FOR OVERDRAFT/INSUFFICIENT FUNDS/BOUNCED REPLENISHMENT CHECK

Deposit Account holders who submit requests for claims and other services for which no funds are available will be charged a $100 "overdraft" fee to cover the cost of extra processing.

This fee is applied for each occurrence, not for each claim filed without funds available. For example, if the Deposit Account holder submitted five registration claims, but the account was exhausted with the first claim, the service charge would be applied once, not five times. Additionally, the Copyright Office will charge a $35 service charge for handling dishonored replenishment checks.
